A HELL ON EARTH

By Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath

The nearest approach to a realization on this earth of what our omniscient evangelical authorities on the Future visualize as the abode of the Damned in the eternity to come occurred in Columbus, Ohio, some ten days ago when the Ohio State Penitentiary was converted into a raging inferno and ravenously consumed the bodies of some three hundred odd mortals who, like so many helpless rats in a trap, ensnared in their steel bound cells. Much less cruel and torturous, however, than Satan's fiery furnace pictured by our tender and merciful divines as being the compassionate means of purgation provided by a Loving Father was this seething hell on earth. At least it was not eternal. The lives were snuffed out within a second's swiftest flight and these poor incarcerated souls soon knew and felt no more . . . unless the all knowing divines be right, and this flaming cauldron but prepared them for their endless roast in hell, to which their gross "sins" on earth had forever doomed them.

It would take a veritable Mephistopheles, we presume, to hazard the thought that the majority of these men was better dead, and that the merciful tongues of flame had ended in a fleeting instant a past that was torturous and fraught with terror; a present, cruel and crushing; and a future, utterly without hope. Years—five, ten, twenty, twenty-five, creeping, crawling, grinding, maddening years, devastating and soul destroying years lay before them. What had they to live for? Bread and water, water and bread; a rock pile beneath the sun's fierce brilliance, building roads across the verdant meadows where even cattle grazed and moved at will; endless nights amid the grimacing shadows of ever encroaching bars, steel-fingered bars tearing into their flesh, sapping their strength, and corroding their souls.

Ah, but while there is life, there is always hope! Some day the prison doors would swing open wide and the day of liberty would dawn. Liberty for what? The brand of Cain upon their brows. Harried and harrassed and hounded by a society that belies its faith in a forbearing Father by never daring to forgive itself—particularly the sinners that it itself has made. Nay, there seemed but little future hope for these whose very existence could never be more than a sign and symbol, an ever present manifestation of humanity's guilt; and hence destined forever to be "wanderers and fugitives", the outcasts and pariahs among men. With sorrow clutching at our hearts and spirits heavy laden, we are tempted to become pathetically minister-like and to say: "May they rest—at last—in peace."

Will this fearful holocaust awaken society? Will the cries of those murdered men rouse us from our eternal apathy. Will the visions of those corpses burned to a crisp, those hands scorched and seared clutching madly at their bars, those countenances, crazed and maniacal, stir us to action? Will something for which humanitarians have entreated and begged for many days be realized at last? Perhaps they did not die in vain, perhaps there is hope; for humanity, it must be remembered, rarely moves forward of its own volition. Ever and always it must be given an effective kick from behind. That kick, it seems, must invariably take the form of some unspeakable catastrophe. Only some dreadful scourge brings at last measures of sanitation long needed and neglected; mounting tolls at grade crossings reluctantly convert fat dividends into criminally delayed culverts and trestles; only such a wholesale slaughter of lives, only such a fiendish blood letting as the World War drives home the absurdity of all such brutal fratricide. Society ever locks the doors of its—Augean—stables, after the horses are let loose. Mayhaps, now, by this same blind stumbling, it shall unlock the gates of its prisons after three hundred human creatures are sacrificed on the altar of man's stupidity.

Ah, to be sure, it will; for man is clever, man is wise; he profits quickly by his experience. Has not the cry already gone up from every corner of this continent for "bigger and better" prisons? Are not the newspapers riding the wave of popular opinion and raising to an overwhelming din that erstwhile still small voice heretofore crying in the wilderness, the voice of the reformer and liberal, so long unheard and taunted and scorned? Did we not peruse the glaring headline of one Ohio newspaper which blatantly shouted to the very skies: "More Prisons Promised" and so all the petty thieves, and gangsters, and murderers and bootleggers are bowing their heads and bending their knees, grovelling in the dust, humbly grateful to a "beneficent and generous" society, rejoicing in the anticipation of more nice soft berths, more tasty meals, more rock piles and roads which are to be granted them—more prisons are promised.

When will society come to its senses? Will not even such a grim tragedy as stalked through that whitened sepulchre of the Columbus penitentiary grant it a semblance of sanity? When will it ever scratch beneath the surface? When will it grasp the unavoidable inference so clear that "he who runs may read" that these prison insurrections, arising one after the other, springing from overcrowded and infested "penitentiaries" arise not from any Communistic or Bolshevistic or Red Propaganda, as is so viciously alleged by Warden Thomas to avert suspicion from the real issues involved, but testify to the unmistaken fact that there is something rotten, radically "rotten in the state of Denmark," that what we need is not to build bigger and better prisons, but to tear down those monstrous social conditions which are dumping hordes of human beings into their inhuman walls.

It would be interesting to ascertain just how many of those martyred souls were "up" for stealing a few pennies (it may have been thousands, but what a mite is even this in a society that speaks only in millions and billions) for their starving families. Ah, yes, they stole. Terrible, satanic sin! But why? How many were "lifers" because driven mad by hunger and want they looted a bank and "bumped off a cop," to them the very guardians of the status quo, the symbols of their oppression. Yes, they were brutal and bestial murderers! But why? How many, after tramping the streets for months, after suffering the humiliation of being shunted from one charity organization to another, after being shamed and pierced by the smug looks of those who whirred past their bread lines in limousines, how many weary of all this travail, sold a bottle or two of the fruitage of the vine which gladdeneth the heart of man? And how many had traded in opium, that "happiness dust" which granted at least a few moments' surcease from pain? How many had commerced in women in an age when human flesh is cheap and when maidens find the bargaining in af-

COMMENTARIES

By Rabbi HARRY J. STERN, of Montreal,
Associate Contributing Editor

WHO IS THE GOOD JEW?

I do not consider that man the good Jew who merely gives charity and has an atheistic view of life. The title of good Jew can not be claimed by one who gives all toward the upbuilding of Palestine and, at the same time, deserts or neglects the synagogue. Jews who are unreligious cannot, in all honesty, be placed in the category of good Jews. They are Jews of course fractional Jews, incomplete Jews. For Judaism along with its racial identity is a religious committment. One cannot be called a good Jew unless he has a religious outlook on life. For religion, even if it is not the exclusive identification of the Jew, is certainly his dominant distinction. A good Jew, of course, to begin with is a good man having a religious outlook plus a belief in the purposiveness of Jewish existence and this belief must become his faith. Faith is more than belief. Faith means the translation of beliefs in daily living.

When we think of the purpose of Jewish existence, we must not consider it merely an accident of physical pigmentation or geographic orientation. That would be little reason for the Jew to endure the sacrifice and pain which it costs to be a Jew. The whole martyrdom of the Jew is futile unless he is actuated by the unshakable conviction that the Jew is here in the world because he has a unique contribution to make to civilization. The Jew is here to espouse the moral greatness of the Hebrew civilization.

What institution is there to promote the purposiveness of Israel in the world other than the synagogue? The good Jew supports the synagogue. He finds the Temple to be the spiritual gymnasium wherein, through spiritual exercise, his religious consciousness is stimulated, his Jewish emotions replenished, his Jewish principles re-affirmed and his Jewish identity rediscovered. No Jew can afford to desert the synagogue though

A small profit was realized during the last three months in spite of the low price of silver.

Rabbi Eisendrath's Editorial

fections more lucrative than going blind or consumptive in sweat shops or mills? How many were sentences for rape because grinding poverty had denied them the love they might have had? How many, driven to despair of any hope whatsoever of saving their fellow creatures by peaceful legislation in a society dedicated to force and moneyed might had hazarded all in a futile bomb? Ah, they were criminals all. Murderers, assassins, thieves, rapists, smugglers, bootleggers, anarchists . . . but who made them so?

Were they so by nature? Were they born that way? Did they inherit these anti-social traits? Unequivocally does the report of the tragic scene enacted on the night of April 21st answer these searching queries. While prison guards, like Torquemados, like Neros fiddling before burning Rome, stood by and let their fellow creatures roast, these "hardened, brutal, beast like criminals" rose to heroic heights, risked their lives, sacrificed themselves for their stricken comrades. Whatever hope we have for humanity was revealed on that flaming night. Not the guards, but the convicts behaved like human beings. What divine capacities had society distorted; what god like longings had mankind mutilated and murdered; what goodness had humanity warped and wasted; what dreams had a selfish acquisitive social order dissipated; what hopes had it betrayed!

And having created these criminals, how madly had society treated them! Here, thrown together in one chaotic mass, were incorrigibles to be sure, but there were others capable of the deepest sacrificial service. Here were mature and conniving, but likewise perplexed and adolescent minds, all hopelessly mixed together. Here were the mentally sick, those whose brains had just run down and were no longer able to think in social terms, yet all were treated alike—except for length of stay—all were punished; none individually diagnosed and individually cured. What utter insanity marks our criminal code and even so devastating an event fails to awaken most of us to the fundamental issues involved.

Yes, for immediate relief, we suppose, overcrowded prisons must be alleviated of their loathsome conditions; even certain reforms ought to be instituted for the pressing present to palliate our primitive treatment of the criminal class, but in the last analysis God grant that we may have eyes that see, ears that hear, and minds that comprehend that what is needed are in nowise bigger and better prisons, but a juster and saner social order for the suffering sons of men.

Death Penalty Upheld by Palestine Court

The appeal of Joseph Mizrachi Urphali from a sentence of death for the murder of one Arab and homicide of another in the riots last August was denied at Jersusalem April 25.

Mordecai Eliash of the defense counsel, one of the leading lawyers of Palestine, asked that a rider be appended to today's judgment reminding it for the consideration of the High Commissioner. He based this plea on an opinion previously expressed in the same court that the evidence was open to grave suspicion. The prosecution added that they also had come to the conclusion that there were doubtful points and consequently felt that if the case were retried, it might be decided differently, but that they could not upset the findings of the trial court. Justice Corrie of the Appeals Court said it would consider the application.

The general feeling here is that Urphali is a victim of false testimony.

Captain Alfred Riggs, a police officer at Jaffa who prevented great bloodshed there when he opened fire on Arab attackers, said to this correspondent:

"I was right on the scene myself and the only man to fire was myself. I am therefore convinced that Urphali was innocent."

Urphali is now the only Jew under sentence of death for alleged participation in the riots. Twenty-nine Arabs, however, are awaiting execution for murder in the riots.

This meeting strongly protests against the shameful attitude of the Palestine Government toward the riot victims" was the resolution adopted by hundreds of Jews meeting April 21 at Safed to discuss the government's compensation payments to the Jewish sufferers in the disturbances last August. Amid stormy scenes of protest, the leading speakers declared the authorities had paid the riot victims only 35 per cent of the government's assessment of damages on an evaluation already representing a considerable reduction of the original claims. In most cases the government paid less than the 5 per cent minimum on claims which the sufferers made, and in some cases paid as little as 1 per cent.

The refugees at Hebron, where the Jews suffered most with sixty-four killed within the course of two hours, including eight American-Jewish youths, received the smallest payments. The Rabbi Hasson family, which is the wealthiest in Hebron, demanded $15,000 for their house, which was destroyed, and for jewelry, valuables and furniture of which they were robbed. They received $57. The Hebron Jewish community, claiming $10,000 for the destruction of the synagogue, the communal offices and the Jewish shelter, received $270.

Another Hebron Jew submitted a minimum claim of $500 for a burned house and received a check for $3.75. A woman whose baby was killed in her arms and who was herself stabbed received $50. A Jewish doctor who fled from Hebron, leaving a valuable clinical outfit, besides his own furniture and clothes, claimed $2,000 and received $300. This doctor told your correspondent: "I asked as little as possible, because I knew the government would try to reduce the claim to a minimum. When I claimed the value of a gold watch which was stolen, a government official told me, "You mustn't exaggerate like that, because Palestine doctors are too poor to own gold watches.' "

In order to obtain the government's compensation, the sufferers must sign a document to the effect that they are satisfied with the amount awarded, definitely waiving all further claim against the government. Also, if the government discovers any looted property, this is to be returned and the owners must refund its value from the compensation received.

The Jewish sufferers are as bitter against the Jewish national institutions as against the government, asserting the Jewish official bodies ought to have taken more effective measures to induce the government to meet their claims reasonably.

Zionists Hear Maurice Samuel

That the Jew in the Diaspora should lift the cloak of depression and steep himself in the buoyancy that fills his fellow-Jew in the Holy Land, was the appeal made by Maurice Samuel, author and lecturer, at a luncheon given in his honor Thursday, April 24th, at the Mount Royal Hotel by the Zionist Organization of Canada. The Dominion-wide United Palestine Appeal will be launched in Montreal May 11, under the leadership of A. J. Freiman, president of the Zionist Organization of Canada.

The luncheon, which was under the chairmanship of Rabbi H. Abramowitz, followed a series of lectures given by Maurice Samuel to the different local lodges of the Zionist Order Habonim.

Mr. Samuel admitted his full realization that the last 20 years were the darkest in the history of the Jews and are not to be compared even with the days of the terrible pogroms of the Middle Ages. "Today", he added, "there seems to be not only an extraordinary unanimity in anti-Semitism throughout the world, but there seems to be a passive form of anti-Semitism, inasmuch as little or nothing is done to ameliorate the existing condition of the Jews. Formerly, we survived by the theory of alternation, that is, while in one part of the earth anti-Semitism would increase it would decrease in another section.

"Now, however, it seems to be a 'psychic obsession' of almost every existing people to keep the Jew out of their land." As an illustration, he pointed to the student riots that recently occurred in Czechoslovakia, and to the new immigration laws of South Africa, which are directed mainly against Jewish incomers. "Yet," he emphasized, "the darkest hour comes before the dawn, to use a trite expression—in this period of trial and tribulation, the Jew ever retains the hope of rebuilding Palestine."

Among those present were Lyon Cohen, A. Levin, L. Fitch, J. Lavinson, Sr., Horace Cohen, Saul Bruck, P. Meyerovitch, R. A. Darwin and H. L. Sourkes.

MONTREAL COUNCIL HEARS OF PROBLEMS FACED BY COURTS

Because habits cannot be changed by the time a young man or woman is 20 or 25 years old, the problem of society is a very serious one. Building up a law-abiding citizenry depends on preventive work, and this should begin when the child is four or five years old. This was stated by Judge Mary Grossman of the Municipal Court of Cleveland, Ohio, speaking particularly on the Morals Court which she organized there four years ago, in addressing the annual luncheon meeting of the Council of Jewish Women Wednesday, April 23, in the Windsor Hotel.

"Our greatest difficulty is the double standard of morals," Judge Grossman declared. "Otherwise good fathers still think, and mothers shut their eyes to it, that boys must sow their wild oats', though they insist on a strict standard for their girls.

"Self-respect and cleanliness of thought must be instilled into both boys and girls, and then they will grow up with the right habits. It is too late for the courts to do anything to put good habits into a boy of twenty who has been running wild."

In addition to the moral teaching in home and church, there ought to be high school classes in hygiene, so that young people will learn the things they must know from persons qualified to teach, and not on the street corner, said Judge Grossman.

The Juvenile Court in Cleveland has charge of mothers' pensions the speaker remarked. She spoke of the Thomas Edison School for "problem" boys, where they are given work that is attractive, and the Jane Addams School for sub-normal girls, where they are taught subjects suited to their capacities, saying that these institutions have done much to reduce the truancy difficulty.

Most of the crimes today are committed by boys between the ages of 18 and 23 years, Judge Grossman said, urging the need for preventive work before the individual comes into touch with the courts, even the Juvenile Court.

The work of the Conciliation Court, as part of the Cleveland Municipal Court, was described by Judge Grossman, who told of the social work done in connection with adjustment of difficulties brought before it. When actions are brought it is not enough to give a judgment, and efforts are made to decide when and how payments are to be made. Most are working people with small wages, who cannot pay up in one sum.

The judge of the Conciliation Court must know many things. "I know when a man's coat fits, and whether the cleaner has shrunk his trousers, and if a dressmaker has cut and fitted a dress properly," she said. Instances of the variety of cases brought before her were given by Judge Grossman—the Jewish peddler and the housewife who had bought a remnant of material from him; the school teacher whose dress did not fit when she received it from the dressmaker, and a tailor and his mind-changing customer.

The Conciliation court saves time that would be needed in ordinary legal procedure and the other costs that would be involved, the speaker showed. About thirteen years old, the court, which started as an experiment, has proved its worth, she affirmed.

Judge J. O. Lacroix, of the Montreal Juvenile Court, spoke briefly. He hoped that the new city executive would give attention to the needs of his court and he also expressed the necessity of a deputy judge being appointed, showing how the docket is wanted to be a heavy one. What is the extension of the power of the Juvenile Court Judge, he said, and also more probation officers.

Mrs. Ben Bernstein, secretary with Miss Mildred Silverman as accompanist, presided, and Mrs. Max Bernfeld thanked the speakers and artists, who were thanked by Mrs. Alton Goldbloom.

MONTREAL JEWISH SCHOOL COMMISSION

News from Quebec Thursday, April 24 was to the effect that the Lieutenant-Governor had confirmed the nomination of the seven members of the Montreal Jewish School Commission provided by the legislation of last session of the Quebec Legislature.

They are S. W. Livingston chairman; Nathan Gordon, Rabbi H. Abramowitz, Edgar Berliner; Dr. Max Wiseman, A. Z. Cohen and Michael Garber. Their jurisdiction extends over all the Island of Montreal as regards the education of children of the Jewish faith, and their task will be either to establish separate schools for such children or come to an arrangement with existing school boards whereby Jewish children may be educated in the schools of such other boards. Such arrangements must be made within one year, and failure to come to such an agreement means establishment of the separate schools.

S. W. Livingston, a mining engineer was a member of the Royal Commission named by the Government to study the problem of Jewish education on the Island. The other Jewish representatives on that Commission were Ald. Joseph Schubert and Michael Hirsch. It was in their names that the legal and constitutional issues as to Jewish educational rights finally reached the Privy Council, after such cases had been heard by the Court of Appeal of Quebec and the Supreme Court of Canada.

Nathan Gordon is President of Temple Emanu-El. He is also a former Rabbi of the Temple, but later studied law and now practises his profession in Montreal. He has played a prominent part in the negotiations with the Montreal Protestant School Commission, which have been going on for the past five years.

Rabbi Abramowitz is Rabbi of Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue on Cote St. Antoine road, a charge which he has held for the past 25 years.

Edgar Berliner is a member of the Berliner company.

Dr. Max Wiseman is a physician and is well-known in sporting circles, especially boxing.

A. Z. Cohen is a member of the firm of L. Cohen and Sons, coal merchants, and has other large business interests. He has been prominent, as well as his elder brother, Lyon Cohen, in the life of the Jewish community for many years.

Michael Garber is a lawyer, practising before the Montreal courts.

All seven members of the Commission are university graduates.

THE SCHOOL COMMISSION

I rather like the personnel of the Jewish School Committee recently appointed by the Quebec Government. All in all, the seven members of this commission constitute a representative group of Jewish citizens and much is expected from them. I realize that their task is not an easy one. However, the members of the group will work in harmony they can accomplish much that will redound to the glory of the Montreal Jewish community. Of course, by working in harmony, I do not mean a "whitewashing" of vital Jewish educational issues. That would mean spiritual suicide. The number seven is sacred in Jewish literature. What a sacred task lies ahead of the Jewish Commission!

BARTERING JEWISH PRIDE

Is it true that Jewish newsboys and newsdealers are selling those French weekly papers engaged in anti-Semitic attacks? It is hardly believable! And yet a faithful reader of Commentaries insists that this is the case. How can self-respecting Jewish boys engage in such an enterprise? It smacks of vulgarity and a lack of Jewish decency.

BRAHM SAND

The youthful and most promising 'celist, Brahm Sand, was summoned this week by the Master Musician to join "the choir invisible".

It is heart-breaking to witness the departure of so handsome and so tender a youth. To see youth die is like seeing the sun suddenly set at the noon of day.

Brahm Sand's was a brief, bright, earthy life, radiant while it lasted with sunshine and joy for all around. He will live in the hearts and minds of those who heard him play his instrument.

Discussing present and future prospects of National Breweries, Limited, subsequent to the annual meeting of the company Norman J. Dawes, the president, expressed himself as particularly pleased with the increased turnover which he thought would show further augmentations during the forthcoming season. He commented on the excellent condition of their plants since the extensions to the Dow and Dawes sections. The new garage, he declared, was second to none from the point of view of modern equipment and utility for even better service than heretofore.

Price Brothers Shows Earnings Maintained in Difficult Year

THE annual financial statement of Price Bros. & Company, Limited, which covers the fiscal year ended February 28, 1930, reveals not only earnings well maintained in a period of unsatisfactory conditions in the newsprint industry, but also a striking improvement in the balance sheet position of the company.

Earnings for the year were equal to 2.13% on the common stock of the company, and compares with 2.14% in the preceding fiscal year. Net working capital is shown at $5,196,334, as against $2,304,842 in the preceding report. A sharp reduction in bank and other loans is the outstanding feature of the balance sheet.

Operating profit for the year under review amounted to $3,332,799, as compared with $3,413,714 in the preceding. Deduction of interest at $727,136 and depreciation at $1,254,232, left net earnings at $1,351,431, against $1,367,420 in the previous year. Previous surplus was brought forward at $2,667,146, making a profit and loss balance in the current report of $2,725,175.

Mining & Oil

According to present plans, construction of the new 1,500-ton mill at Dome Mines should be completed by October of this year, shareholders were told at the annual meeting.

In the course of his remarks, Jules S. Bache, president, stated that although the destruction of the mill by fire last fall had been an unfortunate occurrence, the insurance collected was more than sufficient to cover the cost of a new mill capable of handling the same tonnage as the previous one. The recovery of gold in the clean-up had amounted to an important sum, he added.

The annual report now in preparation by McIntyre-Porcupine promises to show a gross income of at least $4,500,000 for the year ended March 31st. This will establish the highest record so far attained by this mine.

It is expected the report will show operating costs of a little over $2,400,000 with a further $1,100,000 to $1,200,000 for taxes, thereby leaving a net operating profit of between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000.

The new No. 3 shaft at the Lake Shore was put into full operation a couple of weeks ago and present reports are to the effect that it is working satisfactorily. This shaft is now hoisting from 2,000 feet.

Royalite Oil Company, Limited, for the fiscal year ended December 31, 1929, earned profits after all charges of $1,159,733, according to the annual statement just released, as compared with $670,473 in the previous year. C. W. LINDSAY EARNED $6.03 ON COMMON STOCK

The annual financial statement of C. W. Lindsay & Company, Limited, for the fiscal year ended February 28th, 1930, comes thoroughly up to forecasts, with $32.74 earned per share on the preferred stock and $6.03 per share on the no-par value common stock.

The preceding statement covered the fourteen months to February 28th, 1929, so that direct comparison of earnings is hardly fair. For that period $35.59 was earned on the preferred and $6.15 on the common. However, the earnings just mentioned work out on a twelve months basis at $30.50 on the preferred and $5.27 on the common and it is these latter figures that should be contrasted with those indicated for the most recent fiscal year.

For last year net operating profit was $274,180 with total income $364,947. After allowance for bond interest, depreciation and other reserves, net available for dividends, was $248,651. Preferred disbursement absorbed $49,470 leaving $199,181 directly applicable against 33,008 shares of common stock. There was paid on the common $32,970 which left earned surplus for the 12 months at $166,211 bringing total surplus to $354,987.

Turning to the balance sheet one finds that the company has made substantial progress during the past year. Total current assets have been built up to $2,331,374 as contrasted with $2,111,406 a year earlier. Against this current liabilities are up only slightly at $283,530 compared with $216,414. This placed net working capital at the end of last year at $2,047,844, an improvement during the year of $152,852. The current ratio was better than 8 to 1.

During the year first-mortgage bonds outstanding were reduced $25,500, the preferred stock was reduced by 80 shares and the common increased by 200 shares. Total assets were shown at $3,400,566 as contrasted with $3,179,784 at the end of the previous period, an increase of $220,782 in the year.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancor,
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an anchor."

The Canadian Jewish community is now on the last lap of its busy season. As usual there are campaigns and rumors of campaigns and sub-campaigns and campaigns to collect the pledges of previous campaigns. The weeks are all too short and too few for gathering in the shekels and for electing the new officers so that the shekels will be gathered in again some other day. Causes and movements may slumber and sleep or drowse over the summer but now is the time for a final spurt of zeal. This zeal must take care of education and the things which come under it like retiring notes on buildings and thus clearing of sweat the fevered brow of some patron saint who signed those notes and wants to get away for the summer.

When communal speakers exhort their hearers to give to the cause of Jewish education they make their appeal around the warning that ruin stares Judaism in the face unless the rising generation receives a Jewish education. This is their best story and they stick to it year in and year out. They could vary it a little by stressing the importance of decent salaries for teachers. The teaching staff of a Hebrew school, for example, should compare as favorably with the best in teaching staffs as the lavatories and showers in the building compare with those in the most modern institutions. Unfortunately, when you hear a fervid appeal for funds for the local Talmud Torah, here, there, and yon, it means that some committee or other has dedicated itself more to bricks and the modern fetish of classy plumbing than it has to a comfortable standard of living for its purveyors of knowledge and wisdom and holy lore.

Just lately a convention of teachers and principals of Jewish schools held in New York, heard Dr Lee K. Frankel, vice-president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, on the significant subject of "Insurance and Pension System." Dr Frankel expressed the belief that a system of pension and insurance should be adopted by the Jewish teacher with the assistance of communal agencies in view of the inadequate salaries which teachers receive. The speaker said that no teacher could render the best service if oppressed by economic problems and worries about the future. Israel S. Chipkin, Education Director of the Jewish Education Association, in a paper on "Salaries of Jewish Teachers", gave a statistical study which showed how prevailing salaries fall below established minimum living standards.

News reports failed to condense for you Bernard Semel's paper on "What the Community Owes to the Jewish Teacher." But any one with half an imagination would know that one thing he undoubtedly said was that the Jewish community owes the Jewish teacher a decent standard of living and at least a portion of the veneration accorded Jewish learning and those who put up the money for imposing buildings. Even in a general community where public school teachers' salaries are known to be shamefully low this condition should not be true of the Jewish teacher's salary. Jews are supposed to venerate learning. Do they ever strike a hard bargain with a teacher over the lowest salary he can consider?

It is up to the supporters of an institution to know not merely what the teaching staff gets but what it requires. If they are in doubt any Federation can be called upon to make up a proper budget based upon the size of the teacher's family, its mental and spiritual requirements. Such a budget might even include occasional green grapes out of season in the way that Talmud Torah halls include brass name plaques—nice if not strictly necessary. This system might have the added advantage of keeping fairly clear the conscience of Talmud Torah directors travelling in Florida in winter. There must be some few who would rather have Jewish teachers happy and well paid than faced with the spectre of "pension and insurance" and all that subject means.

In Chicago Orthodox Jewish women are so eager to help the poor and the needy that they desecrate the Sabbath in order to do it. Rabbi Felix Mendelsohn, in an editorial in the Sentinel finds that the Chicago Consumptive Aid Society, which is providing the community with a kosher kitchen, aquiesces in a benefit card party for Saturday afternoon. The Sisters of Charity select Friday evening for their annual theatre party. Another society which provides pesachdig food for the needy gives its card party on Saturday, too. Rabbi Mendelsohn wonders what the Orthodox rabbis can be doing while the Jewish women of the city fail in proper regard for the significance of the Sabbath. He fears that these rabbis are so taken up with worry about the yeshivas in Poland that public violation of the Sabbath goes on unnoticed by them.

Wherever there is a branch of the Women's League of the United Synagogue it seems the official duty to remind the Orthodox members of a resolution passed at a national conference last year to the effect that: "Whereas, the indifference, neglect, and often desecration of the Jewish Sabbath is widely manifest, be it resolved that the conference committee of national Jewish women's organizations request its constituent national organizations to include in their programs propaganda for the better and higher observance of the Jewish Sabbath." Why is it necessary to read off this resolution so often to Orthodox women who are already the very repositories of the belief that the observance of the Sabbath is one of the greatest of all mitzvahs? It is quite natural to suspect of them that they would indignantly refuse to go to a card party here on Saturday afternoon or to attend a theatre night on Friday instead of going to the synagogue or spending what used to be known as a quiet evening at home.

For years Orthodox Jews have charged Reform Jews with the breaking down of the Jewish religion through failure in observance of Jewish traditions and ceremonials. Can it be that Orthodox women themselves are becoming weak and unworthy examples to their backsliding sisters of the Reform group? If so they should take themselves in hand while there is time and remember that being affiliated with an Orthodox or Conservative synagogue means that they are openly pledged to be observing Jews. For the real menace that undoes Orthodoxy is the truth which is broken even while it is being professed.

Editor Canadian Jewish Review

In the editorial of your March 21st, issue Rabbi Elsendrath rebukes, censors and castigates all and sundry for sins of omission and commission, supplementing Rabbi Feinberg's charges against American Israel with the crime of glaring hypocrisy.

Hypocrisy is a very harsh term to say the least. The rabbis, in the heat of their righteous indignation, evidently did not think of the trite and pithy truism that, "wie es christelt sich so judelt es sich" and that "Civilization results from an increase of similarity among a group through mutual imitation." It is the "zeitgeist", the spirit of the age. Why name it hypocrisy?

This is not only an age of television, radio and aeroplanes, but also of mergers, big business, slogans, efficiency experts, cheap magazines and jazz. All these are part and parcel of the age. "And the spirit of the age removed upon the face of the earth." Why place the blame upon any particular group when they are simply trying to be up to date, modern? Our boards and trustees, who come in for their share of castigation, are, by force of necessity, men of big business who radiate energy and efficiency.

Like others, bigger and better is one of their slogans. They have efficiency charts and indexes at their finger tips. They know to the fourth decimal that, if the value of a Babe Ruth is placed at, say, one hundred, the rating of the average preacher or minister fluctuates between 12.-5075 and 5.2565 and is still lower if compared with an Al Jolson, Jackie Coogan or a Tom Mix. They are efficient in the only way they know. They judge things according to the values as set by present day civilization and to think and act otherwise would be asking them to be virtuous beyond their ability.

"Wie es Christelt sich so Judelt es sich." Why, even the Psalmist deplores this urge to imitate. "And they mingled themselves with other nations and learned their works." (Ps. CVI — 35) We also find Maimonides, in his Guide to the Perplexed, saddened by the fact that, "We are mixed up with other nations; we have learned their opinions and followed their ways and acts." Why name it hypocrisy?

Psychologists would probably explain this phenomena — and it is one — simply as self-preservation — "first law of nature" — "take on the colour of your surroundings" and so forth, but, may we not rather call this urge to imitate this passion for modernity, this metamorphosis, a first indication — a first step — to the great brotherhood of Man? (Don't laugh).

Now, what about pulpits and preachers? Is their proficiency and aptitude such as to preclude criticism? Has not the spirit of the age its grip on preacher and pulpit as well? They have been an organized institution, our spiritual and religious advisors and teachers, from time immemorial. Can they look back upon their work and call it good? May we not say that every complaint and charge they made is a self-evident proof of their inefficiency? Why blame the few pewholders and the great majority outside who have no tongue to defend themselves?

We, the great hoi polloi, in and out of the pews, admit that, in religion at least, they (the ministers and pulpits) give us an infinite variety to choose from. Ultra reform or liberal on one side and infra Orthodox on the other and all the shades between. An anthropomorphic God at one end and a man-made bible on the other. Ye Gods, on whom can we call to help us choose or bridge the chasm? Are we so much out of the way when we diagnose this very thing as the primary cause of a trophy in our spiritual and religious bumps and a compensating massiveness in our efficiency and imitative bumps?

Why not emulate one great denomination who had the foresight and courage to declare once and for all times, "this is my story and I stick to it."

If the principles we hear from the pulpit are largely opposed to those we have to apply in our present day actual living — some preachers are even apologizing for these contradictions — are they not as deeply involved in the guilt — if there is any?

In conclusion will paraphrase one of the last verses of "Koheleth" — "Of making many arguments there is no end; and much study is a weariness of the flesh." Also Verse 1 of Chapter V of "Koheleth" — "For God is in heaven, and thou upon Earth, therefore let thy words be few."

Milk is a liquid, but it should not ... thought of as a beverage, as ...ething to drink in place of water. ...quids are necessary and desirable, ...d most of our foods contain a ...rge percentage of water. Milk is a ...od containing about twelve per ...nt of solids. These solids are the ...ry best food substances.

If you evaporate a quart of milk, ...u see there about half a cupful of ...ther fats, milk sugar and small ...ounts of certain minerals which ... to make muscles, bones and teeth. ...We cannot see these substances in milk because they are dissolved, but when we use milk, we take them into our bodies and so receive all the nourishment that the milk contains.

In addition to these food substances which build up the body and repair and restore worn-out tissues, milk contains vitamines which are so important in promoting growth and development in children and in keeping children and adults well.

There is no other food which can serve as well as the basis of a diet for a child. It is most desirable that every child should receive the benefits which are derived from the use of a sufficient amount of milk each day in his diet.

There have been many experiments carried out in which the effects of milk upon children have been carefully observed, and these observations have shown that children do benefit by the use of milk.

Milk is rich in calcium (lime) and phosphorus. The green leafy vegetables are another source of calcium. The use of milk assures the body of sufficient calcium, the lack of which causes damage to the bones of the body and to the teeth.

A great advantage of milk is the ease with which it can be combined with other foods. The need of a properly balanced diet is frequently mentioned. The name "protective foods" has been given to milk and the leafy vegetables because of their ability to make good the deficiencies of other foods. If we use milk and leafy vegetables, we are protected from the ill results of an unbalanced or deficient diet.

Milk is the one food for which we have no satisfactory substitute.

"The color may not be gone"

Very often customers sending us washable rugs, bath mats, etc., are delighted to find that our soft water system of washing brings back the original colors to a surprising degree — and today color plays a very important part in housefurnishings. In your spring housecleaning plans, keep this fact in mind and allow us to take the responsibility of renewing these heavier articles that are so hard to manage in the home laundry. We have five different kinds of family wash service, all moderately priced. Phone and get full particulars, or stop any one of our courteous drivers.

Don't get your visions mixed up with your dreams. And be especially careful that you don't indulge in the mental dope that leads one to mistake dreams for visions. The poppy seeds of false contentment and the lotus flowers of easy satisfaction lure many men to dreams that end in mental death.

Honor is the chief content.
That to man in life is lent.

Robert Greene.

Men of genius need a special kind of woman to help them in their strenuous lives. She is rarely one of the dazzling, conquering kind, but is rather the little brown-bird type, gentle, helpful, cheering, with much of the mother-love mingling with the deeper tie for the brilliant, wayward man she both wives and mothers, and who so often is in her eyes but a big gifted child to be humored, petted, cherished.

NEW ORPHEUM PLAYERS PRESENT "TRIAL OF MARY DUGAN"

New Orpheum Players will present to the public of Montreal the most famous mystery drama of the decade, "The Trial of Mary Dugan." Victor Sutherland, the popular director of the New Orpheum Players, is very enthusiastic about this play. It can be truly said of "The Trial of Mary Dugan" that it is the finest novelty of the season. Imagine a mystery drama wherein the curtain plays no part at all. It is always up, even before the audience assembles, and it remains up throughout the development of the story, not being lowered between acts. Imagine further a thrilling mystery being unfolded without the age old aids of dark scenes, pistol shots and stabs in the dark. It is now on view in at least half a dozen capitals of the world. This stirring play, written by Bayard Veiller, author of "Within the Law," and produced by A. H. Woods, led Alan Dale, the New York critic, to declare that "for shear interest and drama it beats the Snyder Case all hollow."

The players are Eleanor Phelps, leading lady; Grandon Keating leading man Frances Woodbury, 2nd. woman; Lawrence Keating, 2nd. man; Louise Gerard Huntington, character woman; Rankin Mansfield, the juvenile; Camilla Griffiths, ingenue. Come to the Orpheum Theatre and be sure of seeing a worthwhile play.

LOEWS' NEXT WEEK

Louis Wolheim, the most proficient "bad man" of the motion picture screen, is the star of the exciting all talking melodrama of the seas—"The Ship From Shanghai" which will have its first Toronto showing at Loew's Theatre next Monday.

Wolheim, eloquent and fear inspiring, plays the role of a ship's steward on a millionaire's sailing yacht. The party is selected from the elite of society in England and America. They meet in China, and the American buys a sailing yacht for the purpose of cruising the islands. The party is gay and lustrous, then the ship is becalmed, and Ted the steward gets control of the water tanks, and thus becomes ruler of this human cargo. The veneer soon comes off and the every member reverts to the primitive as the steward becomes obsessed, on the verge of madness, with his own power over his superiors.

The Island Within

A Novel by Ludwig Lewisohn

By arrangement with HARPER and BROTHERS, Copyright.

(Concluded from last week)

Hollsworthy Brown, D.S.M., joined Dr. Charles Dawson at luncheon in their club. Brown spoke with a perceptible British accent: "You used to know Arthur Levy at Columbia?" he asked.

"Very well. We were great friends at one time. Sort of drifted apart later. A fine chap—quiet, thoughtful, very able."

"Well," Brown said with pursed, ironical lips, "I hear that he's abandoned his wife because she was a Christian and has become religious and has gone on a Jewish mission to the Balkans. Isn't that rather curious?"

Dawson's cool, pale eyes took in Brown with a touch of contempt. "That doesn't sound like old Arthur. Thoroughly decent chap. I'd want to know the facts from him or his wife. I wouldn't carry that sort of poisonous gossip if I were you. As to his casting in his lot with his own people—I don't know but what I like that; it's natural and thoroughly honorable to him. If all Jews did it, I for one would respect them the more. I don't think that Jews who try not to be Jews do themselves any good in the eyes of intelligent people. There's something wrong with a man who betrays his own kind. . . . I didn't always take that point of view. But I've changed my mind about a good many things during the years since the war. . . ."

Reb Moshe said to Arthur: Don't be too enthusiastic. Jews are people. Remember that even our teacher Moses was angry at them. The Jews have always been a difficult people. Avoid two errors—a Gentile error and a Jewish error."

Arthur smiled. "Now you're going to tell a story."

"I am. Listen! A man came to a Polish magnate and asked him: 'What do you think of the Jews?' The answer was: 'Swine, Christ-killers, usurers, not to be trusted.' 'But what do you think of Isaac?' 'A man after my own heart. An honorable man. A kind man. He saved me from bankruptcy.' 'And what do you think of Berl?' 'I have known Berl all my life. He's one of the best.' 'And of Shmuel?' 'Shmuel is a saint as everyone knows.' The same man went to a rich and pious Jew and asked him: 'What do you think of the Jews?' The pious man answered: 'A kingdom of priests and a holy nation, the elect of the Eternal, blessed be his name.' 'And what do you think of Isaac?' 'That thief? That scoundrel? May his bones be broken. He looks at you and you are robbed!' 'And of Berl?' 'A fellow of the same kind, without truth or justice.' 'And of Shmuel?' 'Do you think I am taken in by his piety? A pretentious idiot.'" Reb Moshe hid his hands in his sleeves. "Avoid both errors." Arthur laughed. He was quite sure that he would fall into a thousand errors. He was equally sure that the sky curved over him like a tent against the outer darkness and that the earth which his foot trod was his natural habitation and his home.
